

DATE: October 25, 2018

AGENDA ITEM # 4

TO: Public Arts Commission

FROM: Jon Maginot, Staff Liaison

SUBJECT: Paint the Town Exhibit

RECOMMENDATION: Discuss potentially loaning artwork temporarily from the History

Museum Paint the Town exhibit

BACKGROUND

On September 27, 2018, the Public Arts Commission (PAC) discussed potentially loaning artwork from the Los Altos History Museum exhibit, Paint the Town II. Commissioners King and Waldman were appointed to a subcommittee to work with representatives from the History Museum to recommend 18-20 pieces for the PAC to consider.

DISCUSSION

A total of 18 artworks were selected by the subcommittee. It is recommended that the PAC select eight to ten works to be loaned to the City for a period of six to nine months.

Attachment: Selection of artworks chosen by subcommittee

Artist: Aleksey Krupina

Agree to loan: Yes

Aleksey Krupina Eschenbruecher House Chalk Pastel on Paper

This Tudor Revival cottage at 431 University Ave. was built in the 1920s by Claude Taylor for Roy and Mabel Eschenbruecher, son and daughter-in-law of William and Lillian Eschenbruescher. William Eschenbruescher was the first Postmaster and the owner of the hardware store on Main Street, built in 1908.

Artist: Mabelle Pasmooij

Agree to loan: ????

Mabelle Pasmooij Tank House Acrylic

The 1911 Craftsman style farmhouse, tank house and carriage house at 10 Yerba Buena and its owners received the 2018 Historic Preservation award in honor of the recently completed restoration and the exemplary effort required. These efforts are greatly appreciated and help Los Altos save its historical heritage. This view of the tank house was painted by one of the daughters who lived through the four-year restoration project.

Artist: Rong Lyu Agree to loan: Yes

Rong Lyu Echoed Past of the Station Oil on Canvas

This is an interpretation of how the front of the train station once looked. The train tracks were replaced by Foothill Expressway in 1964. Paul Shoup wanted Los Altos to have "the finest railroad station on the Peninsula," and he delivered. The Craftsman style depot was built in 1913 for $12,000, a sizable sum in those days. Many a commuter traveled from Los Altos to San Francisco and back each day.

Artist: Pat Reid Purt Agree to loan: Yes

Pat Reid Purt Paul Shoup House

Acrylic

The large Craftsman house at 500 University Ave. was built in 1910 for Paul and Rose Shoup. In 1907 Shoup had co-founded the Los Altos Land Company and he led the early development of Los Altos. An executive with the Southern Pacific Railroad, he ultimately became President of the railroad in 1929.

Artist: Will Maller Agree to loan: Yes

Will Maller Shoup Park

Adobe Creek runs from the hills above Hidden Villa through the park named after Paul Shoup down to the Baylands. Now it is dry in the summer time but earlier in its history it ran year around and was full of fish. When Los Altos was formed in 1907, it was his wish that one day his land along the creek would become a park and he in his will he deeded it to the city.

Artist: Maria Pazos Agree to loan: Yes

Maria Pazos

Los Altos Apricot Orchard Watercolor with Photoshop Filter

Tasty Blenheim apricots from the J. Gilbert Smith apricot orchard. Smith sold the property to the newly incorporated City of Los Altos in 1954, and per contract, the orchard is maintained by an orchardist. The apricots are sold at the DeMartini Market across the street. In the 1980s, the orchard was protected by a resolution passed by the city council to create one of the first "heritage orchards" in the county.

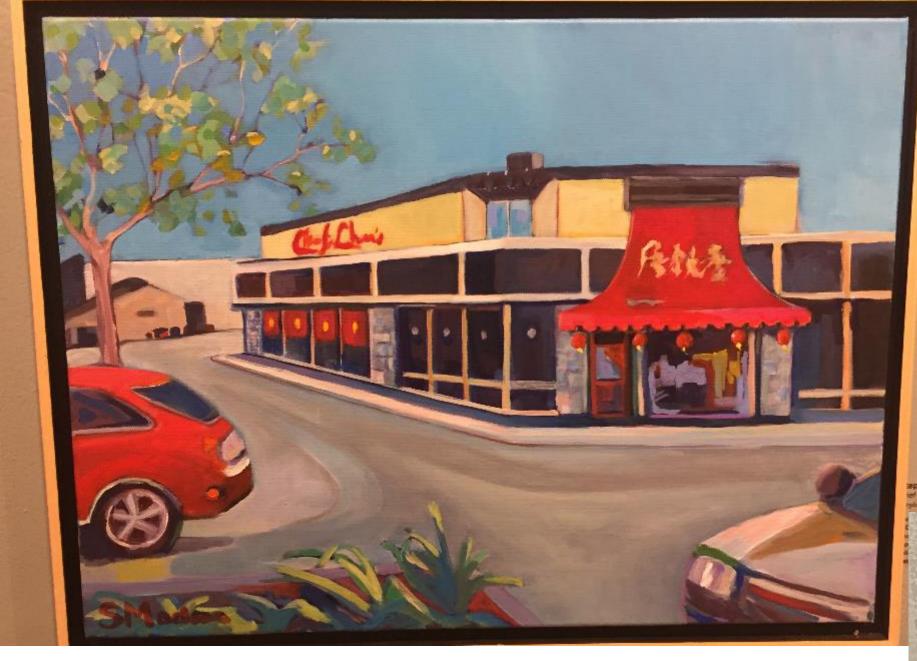

Artist: Esra Senvardarli Agree to loan: Yes

Esra Senvardarli Tom's Depot

Acrylic

Tom's Depot, the former Southern Pacific railroad train stop, is at the heart of Loyola Corners. The name came from the Jesuits when they bought 850 acres in 1904 for a new college, to be named after their founder, Saint Ignatius of Loyola. The university ran into financial trouble after the 1906 earthquake and sold their property (now the Los Altos Country Club). A housing boom revitalized the Loyola business district in the late 40s. Regular passenger service on the railroad line ended in 1958. Construction of Foothill Expressway began in 1964, and the rail stop closed and became Tom's Depot, an old-fashloned corner grill.

Artist: Stephaine Maclean

Agree to loan: Yes

Stephanie Maclean Chef Chu's Acrylic

Chef Chu's at the corner of San Antonio Road and El Camino Real has been a favorite dining destination since opening its doors in 1970. The restaurant is known worldwide for its innovative, tempting cuisine as well as its charismatic owner, Lawrence C. C. Chu who is still involved in the daily operations.

Artist: Suodaba Adel Agree to Ioan: ????

Suodaba Adel

Winchester-Merriman House Acrylic

The house at 762 Edgewood Lane is a Queen Anne style adaptation added to an older two story farmhouse, reportedly dating to the 1860s, and the oldest house in Los Altos. It was purchased in 1888 by Sarah Winchester for her sister Isabelle and brother-in-law Louis Merriman as a 140 acre horse-breeding ranch named El Sueno, the Droam. The dream faded when the Southern Pacific Railroad decided to run a line across the property in 1905. The Winchesters sold and the 100 acres the railroad did not need became Los Altos.

Artist: Naya Chang Agree to loan: ????

Charles Naya Chang

Neutra House

Poster paint and Rice paper

The Neutra House was deelgned and built in 1939 by internationally renowned architect Richard Neutra as an artist's residence, its clean lines exemplify mid-century modernism and it is a precursor to the affordable Eichler homes that became so popular here in the 1950s. The first owner, Jacqueline Johnson, was a graduate student at Stanford University. The house, located on Marvin Ave. was in danger of being demolished in 2005, but was seved by a group of concerned citizens, King Lear in particular, and moved to Hillyriew Ave.

Artist: William Fanning Agree to loan: ????

William Fanning

Guy Shoup House Mixed Media

The house at 452 University Ave. is a stucco variation of the Craftsman style. It was built in 1910 for Guy and Adelle Shoup. An attorney with the Southern Pacific Railroad, Shoup was a co-founder of the Los Altos Land Company and an active member of the community.

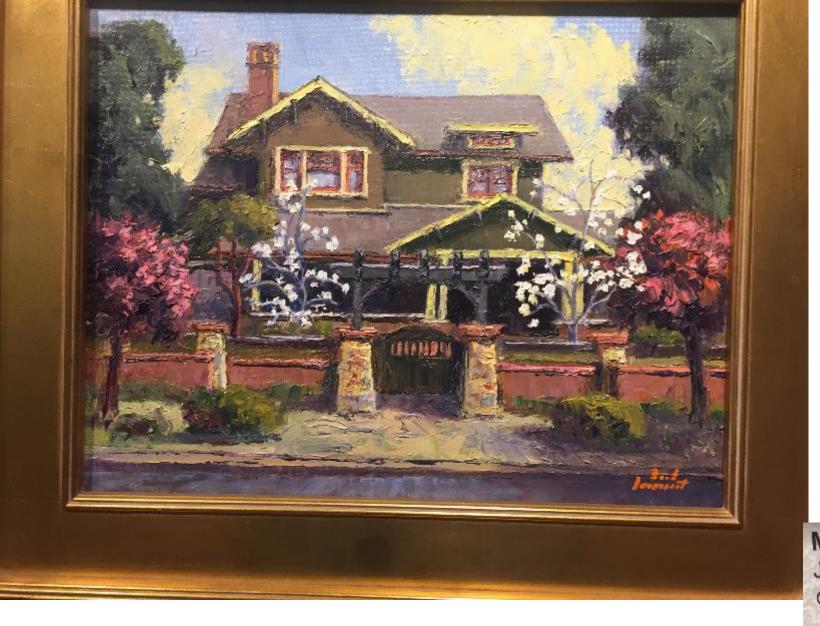

Artist: Doreen Cohen Agree to loan: Yes

Doreen Cohen

View from Jazzercise Fabric and Stitchery

A view of the J. Gilbert Smith apricot orchard in winter. Smith sold the property to the newly incorporated City of Los Altos in 1954, and per contract, the orchard is maintained by an orchardist who sells the apricots at the DeMartini Market. In the 1980s, the orchard was protected by several resolutions passed by the city council to create one of the first "heritage orchards" in the county.

Artist: Mark Monsarrat

Agree to loan: Yes

Mark Monsarrat

Judge Shenk House

The Craftsman bungalow at 711 University Ave. was built pre-1920 and occupied in 1924 by Judge John B. Shenk of the California Supreme Court.

Artist: Eric Greenhut Agree to loan: Yes

Eric Greenhut Frothingham House Watercolor

This vibrant interpretation of the Frothingham House shows the only known example of the Monterrey style in Los Altos. This house at 551 University Ave. features a second story balcony cantilevered and covered by the roof of the main house. It was built in the 1920s and occupied by Mr. Frothingham, the manager of a radio station in San Francisco.

Artist: Aileen Trant Agree to loan: Yes

Aileen Trant

Bleibler House

Mixed Media

A view of the Craftsman bungalow style house at 530 Cherry Ave., built in 1912 by Herman Bleibler, a blacksmith born in Switzerland, and his wife Bertha, on 5 acres planted with cherry, apricot, almond and prune trees. The house is largely unchanged, and the grandson, Armond King and wife Marjorie, live in the home to this day.

Artist: Will Maller Agree to loan: ????

Will Maller

Los Altos Nursery

A view of the fish pond at the Los Altos Nursery, the Furuichi family started farming in the area in 1906, arriving from Japan shortly after the San Francisco earthquake. In 1918 they purchased 5 acres, but were forced to leave during WWII. After the war, with the help of a local group called the Fair Play Committee, they returned, and established the nursery in 1946. Grandsons Darryl and Dean continue working there to this day.

Artist: Susan Mendelsohn

Agree to loan: Yes

Susan Mendelsohn

Foothill Congregational Church
Watercolor

Foothills Congregational at 461 Orange Ave. was the first church built in Los Altos, in 1914. It was Christ Episcopal Church at that time and became Foothills Congregational when Christ Episcopal moved to Border Road. The church is built on land donated by Rose Shoup.

Artist: Patricia Nojima Agree to loan: Yes

Patricia Nojima

Redwood Grove

Watercolor

After the residents of Los Altos voted against a bond measure to save the park from development, the city council in 1974 decided to purchase it anyway, using city funds. It continues to this day as a park and nature preserve. The redwoods were planted by Emma and Theodore Halsey in the 1920s on the banks of Adobe Creek. The creek is now dry in the summer, but 100 years ago it flowed year-round and supported steelhead trout.